UNIVERSITIY OF CAPE COAST

COLLEGE OF HUMANITIES AND LEGAL STUDIES

FACULTY OF ARTS

DEPARTMENT OF COMMUNICATION STUDIES

END-OF-FIRST SEMESTER EXAMINATIONS

CMS 107: COMMUNICATIVE SKILLS

2021/2022 ACADEMIC YEAR

DURATION: 2 HOURS DATE: 13/05/2022

INSTRUCTION: ATTEMPT ALL QUESTIONS.

SECTION A (30 Marks)

Study carefully the passage below, and, then, write an OUTINE or a SUMMARY of it. Your summary should be written in not more than 120 words.

Procrastination is a tendency or behavioural trait shown in an indecisive state or lack in will power to work. Because the delay is irrational, people end up voluntarily choosing a course of action that they know will not maximize their physical, psychological, and material well-being. The definition of procrastination holds a decidedly negative denotation and connotation.

There are six different styles of procrastination: perfectionist, dreamer, worrier, crisis-maker, defier, and overdoer. First, the perfectionist pays too much attention to details that they often cannot finish a project. The dreamer, in contrast, does not pay enough attention to details. They have wonderful thoughts, but, somehow, someone else should just get the details done, so their thinking style is fuzzy. The worriers have an excessive need for security, causing them to fear risk and avoiding finishing projects, so they remain in their "known comfort zones". The crisis-maker, on the other end of the worrier, tells themselves they work best under pressure; thus, waits until the last minute, and often they pull it off, but with a whole lot of anguish and generally not as good as expected. The defier is a rebel seeking to buck the rules. By procrastinating, they are setting their own schedule, one that nobody else can predict or control. The overdoer says 'Yes' to too much because they are unable or unwilling to make choices and establish priorities. They end up actually doing a lot for other people, but often procrastinating what they need to do for themselves. However, it is likely that an individual can adopt multiple styles of procrastination. The goal is to balance each of these areas.

Different factors appear to contribute towards procrastination, particularly, lack of commitment, lack of guidance and encouragement, inappropriate time management skills, emotional stress, social problems, overconfidence, and illness. Thus, students, for example, may procrastinate when they are unable to set a pace of their learning to meet high performance expectations. Students may delay their academic work as their routine and, later on, it becomes their habit. Likewise, longer timelines of completing a task, plenty of leisure time, and co-curricular activities promote procrastination.

Different physical, emotional, and mental problems appear to be associated with procrastination. First, it may create embarrassment and inferiority complex among students, leading to a negative relationship between level of ego identity and procrastination, and lessening confidence among students. Also, high expectancy of completing a task may result in unhealthy sleep, diet, and exercise habits and yield to higher rates of smoking, drinking, digestive ailments, and cold and flu symptoms. There could also be an increase in a lot of stress, worry, and fear, leading to a miserable life with shame and self-doubt. Lastly, it may affect achievement of goals, creating anxiety, cheating, plagiarism and higher use of alcohol, cigarette, and caffeine.

SECTION B (20 Marks)

Identify and correct any concord-related errors in the given passage. Do NOT copy out the text.

This semester has been very short because of the strike action by university lecturers a few months ago. Lectures has ended so quickly one wonder why it is so. The majority are yet to come to terms with this. There is issues that needs to be addressed by the University management. A large number of lecturers was interested in the extension of the time to enable them to cover most of the topics on their course outlines. The students no less than other stakeholders in the university shares a similar opinion. Many a student think that a number of problems must be addressed. James is one of the students who complains about this problems. According to him, her mother is looking up to him obtaining deep knowledge from the university.

SECTION C (10 Marks)

Rewrite the following sentences, correcting any error you may find.

1. Look into the mirror and you will see how truely your image is dazzling.
2. As a concern Ghanaian, I would like to contribute my quota to nation building.
3. It is so annoying when students ask their lecturers to repeat again what has been taught in previous lectures.
4. They have lost their believe in hard work.
5. They may return back when they realize they have been cheated.
6. All over the world, young graduates seek white colour jobs.
7. You are found of copying other people's lifestyles.
8. Our imminent Professor will deliver his inaugural lecture next week.
9. It is a previledge to welcome you here this morning.
10. The party is broke, so therefore, it will not present a candidate to contest the by-election.