A decade[1] ago,[2] a society[3] in Botswana[3] celebrated the first world day of the super-rich[4]. According[5] to the members of the group,[6] it's[7] becoming aridly[8] tedious for the wealthy in cities to display their blessings without people describing them as wallowing in opulence[9]. Leader of the group,[10] [11]Mbembe [12]Xala, observed,[13] "[14,15] Have you ever read [16]Robert [17]Kiyosaki's[18] [19]Rich [20]Dad [21]Poor [22]Dad?[2324] Why[25] do we not celebrate the success of the rich,[26]" he stressed,[27] [28]" in order to learn from their [29]shortcomings and [30]fortitude?[31]" Meanwhile research is beginning to point to a reversal in migration in both urban and [32]peri-urban centres.
